The Joplin News of Thursday says: J. P. McNaughton, the "Big Chief" of the Peorias, who resides south of Baxter, was in Joplin last evening. He has lately returned from Washington, where he conversed through an interpreter, with the "great chief" regarding his tribe and came home well pleased. He now has a "Splitlog" idea in his head and if a company does not soon build a road into the Peoria mines, the "Big Chief" will do so. He had no interpreter with him Tuesday morning about 1 o'clock last night, but the reporter succeedthe Galena House, the first hotel ed in making him understand that built in Galena, was destroyed by information was wanted about the proposed road and the Indian said: fire. The property was owned by proposed road and the Indian said: James Babb, and was insured it "Me build railroad, nobody else was occupied by two families who does."
